Dust Storm Envelopes This Section; Wind Changes

It's a sand storm. It's a forest fire.

These are just two of the causes attributed yesterday for the brown atmosphere which enveloped this section. Housewives closed windows and doors to keep out the dust. Folks went about wiping the dust from their eyes.

Then last night the wind changed and the dust storm ended.

Attaches at the U. S. Weather Bureau, say the storm had no visible effects on crops, pointing out that the clouds were too high to do much damage.

The humidity was exceptionally low, throughout the entire day. This is attributed to the fact that the dust particles absorbed a large portion of the moisture in the air.

There was a brilliant sunset last night due to the dust in the air. The tiny particles stopped all but the red rays of the sun, producing a most attractive effect.

The trees on Burlington Island had the golden color of autumn.

HOME ECONOMICS WORKER BUSY THRUOUT COUNTY

Miss Rhandena Armstrong's Activities Have Wide Scope

VARIETY OF PROJECTS

To many Bucks Countians the manner in which the services of a home economics extension worker are available is not definitely understood, although they are cognizant of the fact that the said representative is helping them in many ways after day.

The home economics extension representative for Bucks County is Miss Rhandena A. Armstrong, who works under the supervision of Pennsylvania State College Extension Service. Miss Armstrong's office is located in the Bucks County Administration Building at Doylestown, and from this point she journeys daily into various parts of the county, supervising various projects and all types of home economics work.

The state extension service is made possible through cooperation with federal extension service. Federal funds are appropriated to the state after such funds are made available for state work. These grouped monies are then available to counties after the counties provide a stipulated amount.

In order to receive the benefits of this fund and the services of an extension worker, it is necessary for the county to have an extension organization together with an executive committee. The personnel of this committee in Bucks County is: President, Isaac Gross, Plumsteadville; vice president, Mrs. Amos Satterthwaite, Yardley; secretary, Mrs. R. A. Martin, Chalfont; treasurer, A. H. Transue, Lumberville; J. H. Hoffman, Doylestown; W. W. Hurley, New Hope; Harry F. Landis, Richlandtown; Walter S. Bishop, Doylestown; Albert Vassey, Lumberville; H. H. Baum, Hilltown; Webster Shive, Fernside; Elmer Stover, Quakertown RD 5; Oscar Rosenberger, Quakertown; R. E. Atkinson, Wrightstown; Amos Satterthwaite, Yardley; Joseph A. Smith, Fallsington; Hartford Benner, Coopersburg; Ralph Crowell, Buckingham; Mrs. Freeman Johnson, Ottsville; Mrs. Evan Stover, Ivyland; Mrs. B. M. Kleppinger, Coopersburg RD; Mrs. Ralph Crowell, Buckingham.

The County Agricultural Extension Association works jointly with Miss Armstrong, and William F. Greenwalt, the latter being the Bucks County farm agent, located at the county seat. The said association has its annual meeting in January at which time officers are chosen.

Miss Armstrong finds much to occupy her time in Bucks County. Her services are available to rural communities, and she will also give of her time and knowledge in larger towns on request, but she is particularly in demand in the farm home and in farming communities.

Many 4-H Clubs are supervised by Miss Armstrong, the groups under her jurisdiction being comprised mainly of girls. These clubs are reorganized in the late Winter, and the majority of the meetings take place during the Spring, Summer and Fall. The young people in the 4-H Clubs well know that the four H's stand for Head, Heart, Hand and Health, and they endeavor to care for their own and others welfare in these four respects, developing their lives in a four-fold manner.

Miss Armstrong has at present the following clubs under her supervision: Garment clubs—New Britain Township, Sandy Ridge section of Doylestown township, Ivyland borough, Warminster township, Carversville, Ottsville community; 4-H school outfit—East Rockhill township, Hilltown township; special dress clubs—Springtown and Kellers Church; food and health project—New Britain borough; canning club project—Plumsteadville, Buckingham. Other clubs will be organized in the near future in Northampton township, Nockamixon township, Richlandtown borough, Edgewood community.

During the past few years there have been 4-H home economic clubs in Spinnerstown, Springfield township, Warrington township, Solebury, Warwick township, Wrightstown.

There are usually about 12 meetings to each project. Local people take the responsibility or organization, attend to meeting place and equipment. Miss Armstrong assists in outlining the meetings, and gives the instructions. It is stated by the home economics representative of the county that junior or senior groups can be organized to carry out all of the projects in any

IMPORTANT TO EVERY REPUBLICAN

On Tuesday next, voters all over Pennsylvania will go to the polls to nominate their party candidates for the offices that are to be filled at the November Election.

Approximately four million men and women of the State are qualified to participate in this Primary, and of that number about 70 per cent are registered or enrolled as Republicans.

Putting the total Republican enrollment, in round figures, at some 2,800,000 voters, it will be an unusually large percentage if 2,000,000 of these participate in the Republican Primary.

For sickness and death, and unavoidable absence, added to the stay-at-homes who refuse to exercise their franchise, always leaves a wide margin between the maximum possible vote and the actual vote cast.

But every Republican who does go to the polls will want his or her vote counted, and that presents considerations of which every wise Republican will take serious note.

In the first place, the nominations that are to be made in this Primary are for offices of the utmost importance—United States Senator, Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of Internal Affairs, a judge of the Superior Court, members of the lower house of Congress, half the membership of the State Senate, the entire membership of the lower house of the Legislature, members of the State and County Republican Committees, and certain local offices.

Long as is the list of offices for which nominations are to be made, the unusual number of candidates who are running for nearly every office makes the ballot an exceedingly large one.

For the gubernatorial nomination, 16 names will appear upon the ballot, even though some half a dozen of these have publicly announced that they are not active candidates. Of the remainder, only four have made any serious canvass for votes. Nevertheless, all 16 names will confront you as you seek that one for whom you desire to vote.

A similar situation prevails as to Lieutenant Governor. Although in this instance, also, only four candidates for the Republican nomination have made any extensive campaign, nevertheless there will be 14 names on the ballot, through which you will have to search for the one you want to support.

The same situation, the same over-abundance of candidates for a single nomination, prevails in respect of many of the other offices for which you will want to vote.

And this is a situation which wise Republicans will consider very seriously, in order that they may be sure of voting—and voting correctly—for each of the candidates of their choice.

The Primary ballot is not like the ballot at a general election, where all the party candidates can be voted for, merely by making a mark in the Party square. In the Primary, a mark must be placed beside the name of each candidate for whom a vote is cast.

The voting, therefore, can be a task of difficulty, or it can be made as easy as checking off the dates on a calendar.

In these circumstances, and inasmuch as every Republican with a sense of his or her responsibilities will want to vote—and vote intelligently and effectively—even the more experienced will want to take the short, safe and sensible course.

If you have not already received, you will receive, a marked sample Republican ballot. The names marked are those that have been endorsed by thoughtful Republican men and women throughout the State. These names are recommended to your consideration as high-type, competent, outstanding candidates.

Make your sample ballot your guide. Take it with you to the polls. The marking of your official ballot will be made simple and certain.

"THE NEW SPIRIT" IS SWEEPING THE PARTY

Attorney General Schnader Says There Is The Will To Win

WILL WIN IN NOVEMBER

PITTSBURGH, May 12—Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for Governor, speaking over a state-wide network from Station KDKA last night, declared that "The New Spirit" was sweeping the Republican party of Pennsylvania.

Schnader asserted that the party, united under his candidacy, as he felt sure of the nomination, would forge ahead to the battle in November with renewed confidence, greater zeal and the will to win under the "New Spirit" that had gripped the party, since the canvass for Governor started.

"I should like to offer Pennsylvania Republicans a title for what I believe is their salvation and their hope. It sums up my campaign for the Governorship.

"I call it the New Spirit in Republicanism.

"With this New Spirit I believe the people of Pennsylvania can regain for themselves peace, prosperity and that security which is essential to happiness.

"I believe they can unite a militant Republican party and make it an example for the Republicans of other states. The New Spirit must be fired by the youth of Pennsylvania Republicanism.

"The young man and young woman, free from the ancient and outworn

DOYLESTOWN SELECTS SUCCESSOR TO DR. ROSS

Former Teacher To Return With Contract For One Year

FIX SALARY AT $3,300

DOYLESTOWN, May 12—The School Board at a special meeting elected Dr. George R. Cressman, of West Chester, supervising principal, to succeed Dr. Carmon Ross, who has resigned the position in order to accept the presidency of the State Teachers College at Edinboro, Pa. Dr. Cressman will assume his duties when Dr. Ross severs his connections with the local schools about August 15.

The School Board had canvassed the possibilities of a successor to Dr. Ross ever since it was generally known that he would accept the position offered him at Edinboro. Dr. Cressman was chosen from a field of more than fifty candidates.

Dr. Cressman is 41 years of age, married, with a family of two children. He is a graduate of Pennsylvania State College, has his Master's and Doctor's degrees from the University of Pennsylvania. He entered the World War in 1918, serving ten months.

He taught in the Gloucester, N. J., high school part of a year, and then became teacher in and principal of the Kennett Square High School for three years, after which he was appointed Assistant County Superintendent of the schools of Chester county, which position he has filled to the present time. Dr. Cressman has made a special study of "The County Unit of Administration" and is co-author of "A Digest of the School Laws of Pennsylvania."

In the selection of Dr. Cressman the school board feels that it has selected some one who is thoroughly familiar with the organization and methods of instruction followed in the Doylestown schools so that the high standards set for many years will be followed out and continued.

Dr. Cressman was given a one year contract for $3,300.

HIGH SCHOOL NINE LOSES TO SOUTHPAW

Swamped By An Avalanche of Base Hits by Visitors

FINAL SCORE IS 7 TO 5

By Jack Orr

Swamped by an avalanche of base hits, eight of them extra-base blows, the Bristol High "Bunnies" again were defeated by a left handed twirler as the Riverside team defeated the Bunnies, 7-5, on the local high school diamond, yesterday.

To date the Red and Gray Club has five victories to four defeats, all the losses being chalked up when a southpaw pitcher opposed the "Bunnies."

The Riverside nine led by "Jimmy" Schneider, basketball and football star, found the offerings of Fry and Wright for eleven blows, six going for doubles while two were lined far and wide for circuit clouts.

Schneider came through with two doubles and a home-run in four times at bat. Thruer, the pitcher of the visitors, pounded a four-bagger in the first inning to give his club a one-run lead.

The Jersey boys held a 5-1 lead till the sixth when the home club found the slants of the opposing twirler for four runs: Rockhill started the inning by gaining first via error; Gibson tripled to right; Berry fanned; Wright scored Gibson on a smash to second base. TEN JUMPERS TIE IN FIRST THREE PLACES HERE TODAY

Deadlock for 1st Three Places In Boys' Running High Jump

BIG CROWD APPLAUDS

Bucks County Interscholastic Track and Field Meet Under Way

With atmosphere that tends to make the contestants feel "peppy," the sun shining just enough to make the day enjoyable, and an exceedingly fast track, the 14th annual Bucks County interscholastic track and field meet gave much promise today.

Bright and early boys and girls from every corner of the county commenced assembling on the high school field, where the annual events have been run off for the past few years, and shortly before 10 o'clock the crack of a pistol announced the start of the boys' preliminary in the Class D 60-yard dash; while at the same time Class A boys' running high jump; Class B girls' basketball throw, and Class C girls' standing broad jump were scheduled.

Seven hundred and six participants are listed for the scores of events which are expected to conclude at about five o'clock. The participating schools are: Bensalem Township, Bristol borough and Bristol township, Buckingham township, Falls township, Hulmeville, Langhorne-Middletown, Morrisville, New Hope, Newtown, Nockamixon, Quakertown, Richboro, Sellersville-Perkasie high school, Springfield, Tullytown, Upper Southampton, Warminster, Yardley, Sellersville grades, Lower Makefield, Perkasie grades.

Seated before the "mike" in the center of the large field is Doron Green, president of the board of directors of Bristol public schools. Mr. Green has ably cared for the announcing of events ever since the meet was first held here. The amplifying system is proving most satisfactory, and is clearly heard on all parts of the field, thus adding to the smooth manner in which the events are being run off.

The track seemed too fast for two young women, who met with spills. But proving most game they hurriedly gained their feet and were soon off again.

Bucks County Scout Executive William F. Livermore, and a corps of Boy Scouts as assistants, are proving of great assistance, with the Scouts serving as pages, and giving valuable aid in many ways.

Coaches are looking for a big day, and some predict that in many instances records will be broken.

The field presents a most colorful scene, with its hundreds of boys and girls in their natty sports uniforms. A kaleidoscope of tints is presented to the eye of the visitor, and visitors are numerous, many accompanying the students from their localities to the meet.

Early returns showed that in the Class A boys' running high jump, two tied for first place, the next two were even, and likewise with the following five. A jump of 5' 2" was recorded for Ross, of Langhorne-Middletown, and for Edwards of Morrisville. The next three who tied in this event were: Seneca, Bristol; Shields, Newtown borough; and Daugherty, Langhorne-Middletown. Following close upon the heels of these were the following five who also finished even: Hunsicker, Sellersville-Perkasie; Fagan, Bristol; Nolan, Newtown borough; Detweiler, Quakertown; and Efling, Bensalem Township.

Class B girls' basketball throw resulted thus: First, Reso, Yardley, 140' 7"; Ward, Falls; Fisher, Richboro; Isler, New Hope; Gresh, Buckingham; Reim, Upper Southampton.

Class B girls' baseball throw resulted thus: First, Reso, Yardley, 74' 9"; Ward, Falls; Fisher, Richboro; Isler, New Hope; Gresh, Buckingham; Reim, Upper Southampton.

Points were recorded in the following manner: First, 6; second, 5; third, 4; fourth, 3; fifth, 2; sixth, 1.

MOTHER'S DAY

The American people have so many faults of character and conduct, that pessimistic philosophers sometimes regard them as nearly hopeless. And then our folks will often show finer traits, which prove that they have capacity for noble action. One of these traits is well illustrated by the annual observance of Mother's Day, which appears to have become a permanent custom.

Whatever mercenary and selfish thoughts may animate our people, yet a very tender motive on their part has created this observance. Through all the coarsening experiences of life, they preserve this warm and generous affection. It is a kind of beacon star in their lives, guiding them toward the better pathways.

And so on this occasion innumerable mothers are rejoiced by tokens of love, by letters and visits from sons and daughters who have flown far from the home nest, all testifying to a gratitude that will never fade out of their minds.

The very best tribute to be paid to a mother is not any costly or choice gift. It is the carrying out of one's life of the ideals which the mother cherished for the child. Whatever mistakes a mother may have made, she wants her child to be true and worthy. The thing that makes her happiest is to see a son or daughter doing fine and generous things.

THESE NEED EDUCATION

Twenty-one American cities have in operation one or more schools in which crippled children are educated in conjunction with necessary correctional, medical and surgical treatment. Remarkable results are being obtained by these institutions.

The crippled child is a social problem. Generally he or she is unable to keep up with normal classmates and formerly was permitted to drop out of school to go through life handicapped physically and mentally. Education is more valuable to the physically deformed or crippled than to the physically normal.

Smaller communities cannot finance special schools and hospitals for the instruction and treatment of these children, but there must be a way for every community, no matter how limited in population and financial means, to give them an education at least.

Every physically defective child society makes independent through schooling or correctional treatment is a good investment. Were that child to continue through life a public charge, the cost to society would be far in excess of the other cost.

Citizens and civic organizations are concerned and should help make it possible to give these unfortunate children the attention they so sorely need.

Even if wealth is a burden, lack of it is more so.

Some forms of inflation are worse than others. The cranial variety is especially pestiferous.

What makes us thing Dillinger isn't a good citizen is that he doesn't stay anywhere long enough to vote.

This is not a hint, you understand. We're just idly wondering why the tax collectors never go on a strike.

"MA CINDERELLA" by Harold Bell Wright

SYNOPSIS

In the little village of Pine Knob, in the Ozarks, "Uncle Jimmie" Cartwright laboriously rides his mule towards Ann Haskel's house, speculating on the possibility of "refreshments," when he comes upon Diane Carrol painting the landscape. Though born to wealth, Diane, like her late father, is indifferent to society. She is seriously interested in art and leading a useful life. Diane accepted a friend's invitation to visit Wilderness Club in the Ozarks upon learning that she could paint there and do just as she pleased. "Uncle Jimmie" and Diane take to each other instantly. He is surprised upon learning she is a New Yorker, to find her just like a "home folks." As they talk, Ann Haskel, a typical backwoods character, appears on a big bay horse. The old mountaineer informs Diane that Ann practically runs that part of the country. Ann lives on a farm with her step-son Jeff Todd, an "ornery cuss," and Nance Jordan, her housekeeper. Years ago, following the death of her first husband, Ed Haskel, Ann sent her young son, John Herbert, away. No one dared ask where or why, but they remembered it was about that time that Jerry Shannon, a family friend, stopped visiting. Jeff Todd, a revenue officer who was killed by a revenue officer in a bootlegging raid. "The revenue officer he never told nobody what he knew; he didn't live long enough," said "Uncle Jimmie."

CHAPTER IV.

There was something beneath Uncle Jimmie's simple words which caused Diane to look at the old mountaineer with a new interest. She had thought these people of the backwoods a poor, ignorant, spiritless folk—too shiftless and incompetent to do more than eke out a bare existence. And, in a way, she was right. But she glimpsed, now, another quality of the backwoods character. Beneath the apparent apathy there was a quality as hard as tempered steel, with an indifference toward death which was startling.

Casually she asked, "Were Ann Haskel's other husbands all killed by revenue men, too?"
"No. One died in a fight over on the head of Snake Creek; one war took natchal—some sort of a fever—nobody never rightly knowed jest what 'twas; another one died while he war in prison fer stealin' horses. Ed Haskel—John Herbert's paw—he let a tree fall on hisself."

"It's nice to know that most of Ann's husbands died violent deaths, isn't it?" murmured Diane. "One seems rather to expect it of them."

"Uh-huh—seemed more natchal to 'em, after livin' with Ann, I reckon."

"I suppose there are moonshiners stills everywhere in these mountains?" Diane remarked, tentatively. "There are so many wonderful places to hide them, and since prohibition the business must be good."

Uncle Jimmie looked at her shrewdly. "I reckon as how you-all at the Lodge ain't havin' no trouble gettin' all the hard licker you can drink, be you?"

"Not me, Uncle Jimmie," laughed Diane. "I don't happen to care for hard liquor, myself. You are right, though, there seems to be even more than an abundance."

"An' why shouldn't thar be?" demanded Uncle Jimmie, belligerently. "If a body plants a patch of cawn an' tends hit an' the Lawd makes hit to grow fer him, hit's his own cawn, ain't hit? If a body takes that cawn what's his'n to the mill on a grindin'-day, an' the mill turns hit into cawnpone, an' he walks cawn pone outen hit, ain't he a right to eat hit an' thank Gawd-a-mighty fer his daily bread? Wal, supposin' a body takes his own cawn what the Lawd growed fer him, an' feeds hit to his haws, don't the Lawd turn that cawn into hawg meat? An' nobody but Gawd-a-mighty could turn cawn into hawg meat, I reckon. An' ain't that hawg meat what the Lawd made outen that cawn, the man's own hawg meat when the cawn and the hawg war his'n? Can't a man sell his own hawg meat, or eat hit, or give hit to his neighbors, or throw hit to the dawgs if he wants? Can't a man do what he wants with what's his'n? I'd sure admire to know if he can't. An' I'd sure admire to see anybody try to tell him he couldn't. Wal, then, by G-e-e-rusalem-on-high! a body's got a right to take his own cawn what the Lawd growed fer him, an' let the Lawd turn hit into hawg meat, same as if licker war cawn pone or hawg meat. An'-a-body's got a right 'fore Gawd-a-mighty to do what he wants with his own licker. An' no law can stop a man doin' what he wants with his own; sich a law would be ag'in nature an' ag'in Gawd-a-mighty. Supposin' you war a Jew an' hit war ag'in your religion to eat hawg meat; that wouldn't give you no right to make a law that a Methodist or a Baptist couldn't feed his own cawn to his own haws an' do what he wanted with his own side-meat an' haws an' sich. This hyear's a free country yet—leastwise these hyear parts air, an' hit's agoin' to keep on bein' free, too."

"Help!" cried Diane. When Uncle Jimmie did not even smile she added, gravely, "I'm not arguing with you, Uncle Jimmie."

"You'd best not," the old mountaineer retorted, grimly. "I sure do git bet up 'bout sich things, an' when I'm real hot I'm some dangerous."

Diane felt that in his last statement, at least, Uncle Jimmie had spoken the literal truth.

"Mebbe you're a revenue yourself, fer all I know," the old man added. "You can't never tell."

Diane laughed merrily. "Oh, come now! You know you never heard of a woman revenue."

"They do say hit war the wimmen what made them fool licker laws, an' if they war fools enough to make 'em, why wouldn't they be fools enough to try an' make folks keep 'em? I've even heard tell of wimmen policemen, an' wimmen judges, an' sich, in the cities. I'd sure admire to see any woman try to hold court in this hyear neck of the woods—less'n hit war Ann Haskel." His eyes twinkled as he eyed Diane's costume. "I've sure seed plenty wimmen a-wearin' breeches, an' I've seed them Lodge wimmen a-wearin' not much of anything when they war swimmin' in the river—right with the menfolks, too. But, shucks! I know you couldn't be no revenue," he added, gently.

"Not with them eyes. You're too kind an' friendly-like to go snoopin' 'round makin' trouble fer poor folks what ain't only usin' what the Lawd gave 'em to use."

"Thank you, Uncle Jimmie. I promise not to make trouble for anyone. But tell me, are there really any stills in this neighborhood?"

"That sure is a purty pitcher you're a-paintin'," said Uncle Jimmie, thoughtfully.

Diane laughed. "I'm asking you about stills."

Gravely the old backwoodsman returned. "You got education. What do you say, now? Is this hyear old earth round or flat?"

"Why—why the earth is round, of course!"

"Uh-huh—I 'lowed you'd say that. What makes you think she's round?"

Diane offered the usual evidence.

"Uh-huh, I reckon that's what the books say, an' hit sounds that a way to hyear you tell hit, but 'tain't so. The earth ain't round, she's flat. She jest natchally can't be round, an' what's more I can prove by the Bible she ain't round."

"Oh, of course, if you can prove it by the Bible."

"Wal, I sure can. Don't hit tell in the Bible 'bout the four angels a-standin' on the four corners of the earth? Any d-d-burned fool would know they couldn't do that if hit war round."

With this Uncle Jimmie arose to his feet and awoke Ahab by climbing into the saddle. With a preliminary jerk or two of the rope reins, and a vigorous thump of his heels, which Ahab received with his melancholy indifference, he said:

"Me an' the old woman would be mighty proud fer you to come an' see us, Diane. Thar's a heap of purty pitchers on Shady Creek that's been a long time waitin' fer somebody to paint 'em. I know they're thar right enough—all the different greens, the dark pines, the hillside rocks, the boulders in the creek, the daicuin' shadders—oh, I been a-seein' 'em all my days but I ain't never before seed nobody what little brushes an' paints like you can."

"Oh, thank you, Uncle Jimmie. I should love to. I just follow the trail, do I?"

"Jest foller the trail, hit ain't more'n a mile from the Lodge."

When with reins and heels he had at last aroused Ahab to such interest that the mule seemed actually on the point of moving, Uncle Jimmie leaned down from the saddle for a last low-spoken word:

"If I war you, hyear, I wouldn't be askin' too many questions 'round these parts. Folks what don't know you like I do mightn't understand. Ann Haskel she's jest p'sen on anybody what asks questions. An' if Ann don't take a likin' to a body hit ain't so easy to git along in this h-year neighborhood. Giddap, Ahab. Go long. Rody'd think you war aimin' to stay hyear a-pesterin' Diane all day."

During the days which followed, as she worked on her picture near the Haskel place, Diane often looked with speculative interest toward the big log house. She had felt that beneath the strange things were hidden. What did it all mean? Why had Ann Haskel sent her boy out of her life so completely? What had become of young John Herbert—the last of the Haskels? How had he lived? What sort of man had he grown up to be—if he had lived to grow up at all? What secrets were shared by Ann and her companion, Nance Jordan? Judge Shannon, who used to come into the mountain wilderness to hunt, but who came no more after the death of little John Herbert's father—where did he fit into the picture? What went on in the wild seclusion of those wooded hills so far from the thickly settled communities where representatives of the law stood on almost every corner and patrolled every road and street? A multitude of secret interests—an army of men—might easily be concealed in those lonely gulches and caves on the many hidden creeks and branches, and in the tiny obscure valley which were to be reached only by those who knew the scarcely visible trails. She felt something mysterious and furtive lurking in the forest about her, as one in a dark room might feel a sinister presence. Wary eyes seemed to be watching her from the leafy screen of trees and bushes. And every day she glimpsed in the forest—now here, now there—the strange woman on the big bay horse.

Had Diane Carrol been given to indulging in nerves she would have fled as from a plague-stricken district. But, being Diane Carrol, she went calmly about her work and, in spite of the old mountaineer's friendly warning, asked questions.

They told her at the Lodge that Ann Haskel was a terrible creature—fearless, suspicious, cruel. They said that she was never known to smile or laugh. They described how she laughed an ax or a gun like a man. They related how she ruled over the countryside like a feudal chief, and asserted that in backwoods politics her word was final, and that no man could be elected or appointed to any office without her permission. They told how the more than one newcomer in the neighborhood, failing to win her approval, had been forced to pack hurriedly and move on to other parts.

Pappy Giles, who kept the Pine Knob store and post-office, when Diane tactfully mentioned Ann Haskel, related incidents which revealed another side of the mountain woman's character.

"Uncle Jimmie Cartwright 'lows you're home folks," Pappy 'lows as if to justify himself in talking to an outsider about forbidden things. "I've tuck notice mysef that you ain't so uppity as them others at the Lodge when they come sometimes like you do fer their mail."

Eight years ago, "come next fall," Pappy was down with a misery in his back, so bad he couldn't so much as stand on his feet. Ma Giles was a helpless invalid. The poor old couple were in desperate straits. They were living, then, away over on the head of Lonesome, with no neighbors nearer than six miles. Things got so bad there was nothing in the cabin to eat for two days and no way to go or send for help. Then, who should come riding out of the brush but Ann Haskel, an' the big bay horse was carrying not only his mistress, but a whole side of meat, a sack of corn meal, a sack of white flour, and a heap of other fixings—fatners and sugar and tea and coffee and tobacco and liniments.

"Thar's them what thinks Ann Haskel's a devil," said Pappy, thoughtfully. "An' I reckon as how thar's been times when a body might have reasons fer sich thoughts, but I'm a-tellin' you, miss, that thar war one time when she looked to Maw an' me more like an angel."

How Will Your GARDEN GROW?

FOR many of us who have only dabbled in the soil, a bright row of fragrant flowers will always hold the greater charm, yet there are good reasons why the kitchen garden is winning a place in the sun.

A foremost industrialist says that home-grown vegetables are an economic need; a correspondence school is teaching how to make the backyard garden pay; and the producers and purveyors of garden accessories are making it easier for you to coax from the good earth either hunger-satisfying foods or blooms that fill the soul.

Read the advertisements in this newspaper for up-to-the-minute gardening news. They supplement the information provided by our own writers; they feature new implements or new services and tell you where to secure most of the things the modern garden needs.

PARIS IS BEGINNING TO DISCOVER SOME OF AMERICA'S FASHIONS

By Nadia De Beaud

PARIS—(INS)—Paris is beginning to discover America. After bringing here American cotton prints, Columbia yarns have crashed into the market, made up into the most fascinating hand knitted ensembles by Anny Blatt, who specializes in these sport clothes. I saw Miss Somerset Maugham, daughter of the famous author, a few days ago on the rue de la Paix, a blond and pretty young woman, walking with her mother.

She wore one of these suits in a boucle knit of intricate pattern that was especially attractive owing to the color combination. The smoke blue redingote shaped blouse had a draped effect in front formed by two crossing bands, buttoned down on each side.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.,—Film stars and dozens of owners of expensive automobiles were thrown into panic in Beverly Hills by smoke bombs placed within the hoods of their cars.

These terrifying gadgets, now purchasable for 25 cents, are hooked onto a pair of spark-plugs. When the motorist starts his engine, there is a warning whistle (like an airplane's siren), then an explosion followed by a cloud of smoke through the hood vents.

Practical jokers planted the "bombs" all over Beverly Hills the other day. The Danish star, Carl Brisson, was one of the first victims and leaped out of his swank machine in the belief that it was on fire. Scenarist Charles Furlmann had the same experience, and, as the day went on, dozens of motorists reported visits by the "smoke bomb" jokers.

In nearly every case, an expensive automobile was chosen.

Here's news. The cinema stork has an October date with Florence Lake, sister of Arthur Lake and wife of Yacovillian and Stage Actor Jack Good. Florence is newly arrived in Hollywood, and will make three comedies for R-K-O before retiring from the screen to await the birth of her baby.

Seeing only her intimate friends and saying nothing of her plans, Ruth Chatterton is leading the quiet life since her return from New York. The star lives in her Beverly Hills home, where her mother spends part of the time with her. Among the others she sees are Grace Moore and her husband, the Dick Barthelmesses and Virginia Hammond, former stage favorite, who accompanied Ruth to New York and was with her when the star announced her separation from George Brent. At Ruth's request, the subject of her marital troubles is never brought up.

In his new bachelor estate, Brent has rented Charles Farrell's home in Toluca Lake. He lives there alone with his valet and house servants.

Interesting that the British do not agree with Hollywood's selection of the best performance of the year. Ignoring Charles Laughton in "Henry VIII," the English exhibitors and fans have awarded the Film Weekly Medal to Madeleine Carroll for her work in "I Was a Spy." Miss Carroll, whose blonde beauty has upset masculine Hollywood during her stay at Fox, leaves here to return to England. She may return later, but, despite numerous offers, has no definite plans.

Presumably to see the first American picture of her old friend, Carl Brisson, Greta Garbo slipped quietly into the Westwood theater this week for the preview of "Murder at the Vanities." Clad in a long blue coat, a slouch hat and wearing dark glasses, the star made an unobtrusive entrance into the theater and (if you can believe several reliable witnesses) stood in the back of the house to see the picture.

KNICK KNACKS—

Bill Powell's boy hates to be called Junior and always points out that his name is William David Powell. . . . Despite what some of his fellow actors feared, Will Rogers sticks strictly to the script of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness." . . . Irvin Cobb's daughter, Elizabeth, is writing a new novel. Incidentally, her humorist father never sees her work until it has been to the publishers.

The King's Club, an intimate room, is now Hollywood's favorite late spot. It turns them away even on week nights. . . . Lots of gay nonsense in Robert Neal Leath's new Hollywood novel, "Blondes Play Too Rough." . . . R-K-O now says its "stolen" machine gun actually was safely put away by a property man who forgot to tell them on the set. . . . Randy Scott is going to a dramatic school to get rid of his Southern accent. . . . Leroy Prinz, the dance director, had a valuable "first edition" left in his office. And thereby hangs a tale.

DID YOU KNOW—

That Clark Gable, hunting in Arizona, actually had three mountain lions up a tree at the same time? He got caught.

SPORTS

PITCHERS BATTLE FOR ENTIRE TILT; EDGELY WINS

By T. M. Juno

Twilight League fans were treated to an old fashioned hurling duel last night on Leedom's field as the Edgely Braves captured their third straight victory of the local season.

"Johnny" Harmsen, of the Braves, and Hal Snyder, of the Hibernians, were the participants in the masterpiece of twirling. After five innings of mound toil, the Edgely team had scored two runs while the Hibernians were still trying to push a run across being blanked throughout.

Snyder, the losing moundman was just as effective as Harmsen. But two wild pegs from the paws of his battery mate, Joe Dougherty, spoiled his night. On two occasions, Dougherty tried to nip runners off the third base sack and each time, the ball was a trifle wild and got away from the third-sacker to allow a run to score.

Leo Hibbs made a nice catch of Snyder's long fly in the last inning. The hit was labeled for at least three bases.

Hibbs ended the inning by grounding out.

Home Economics Worker Busy Throughout County

part of the county. But it is made plain the request must come from the group interested, and this group must take the responsibility attached thereto.

The combined 4-H clubs have a county picnic and a county round-up annually, each member making a display of the project work participated in at the time of the round-up. Each one likewise takes part in a program. Officers are selected to serve each group at the time of organization. Each girl keeps a record of her accomplishments in the club projects. This year local leaders (the older group sponsoring the 4-H Clubs) met in Doylestown to discuss problems of management and the duties of local leaders and of the county extension representative. It is the desire of Miss Armstrong to make this an annual meeting.

This year marks the second that the 4-H Club County Council has been held. Each club on March 31st sent its president and secretary as delegates to the 1934 Home Economics 4-H Council at Sandy Ridge school house, near Doylestown. The object of such is to promote higher standards of leadership.

In addition to the projects underway by 4-H Clubs in the county, it is possible for clubs to take such other projects as: school lunch box, baking, room improvement. The 4-H Clubs include girls from their 10th to their 21st birthdays.

For women in the rural sections the home economics representative is available for all phases of home-making, from nutrition and health (selecting, preparing and cooking), through clothing (construction, selection and renovation) to household management and household furnishings. In general practice the extension representative recognizes 10 projects in food and health; eight in clothing; eight in home management and furnishings; aside from organization and leadership.

Community groups that have organized during the past three years for extension projects include: Spinnerstown, Kellers Church, Blooming Glen, New Britain township and New Britain borough, Eureka, Warrington, Ivyland, Southampton, Richboro, Cornwells Heights, Newportville, West Bristol, Edgewood, Newtown, Langhorne, Woodbourne, Penns Park, Washington Crossing, New Hope and vicinity, Lahaska, Danboro and Gardenville sections, Richland township. Single demonstrations have likewise been given by the extension representative in other communities.

The meetings of an extension nature may be a series of four or five in such projects as food selection and preparation in which a discussion of food values will be given, along with cooking of different foods; or clothing projects in which undergarment patterns would be drafted and plain sewing as well as practical decorative finishes learned; or for groups interested in altering commercial patterns, and cutting and finishing of dresses. Series of meetings may also be conducted in household furnishing and decorating, with the principles of good taste, etc., applied. Single talks and demonstrations are also given by Miss Armstrong in canning, planning a wardrobe, bread-making, refinishing furniture, and illustrated lectures on foods, kitchen arrangement, and posture.

Specialists from State College are also secured by Miss Armstrong for special meetings. Much information is also placed before the county residents by the representative through the press; and circulars are mailed to those who cannot attend certain meetings, but who are interested in the projects or activities.

Since January of 1931 has Miss Armstrong been located in Bucks County. It has only been during the past three years that Bucks has enjoyed the services of a full-time home economics extension representative. For a time previous Bucks and Montgomery Counties were jointly under the direction of Miss Ethel Beadles.

The girls in the 4-H Clubs under Miss Armstrong's direction have received many prizes for their work which was displayed in competition at state shows and fairs, and the prizes prejudices which have impeded harmonious party action, are active in my campaign for Governor.

"They were among my earliest supporters. My original sponsors were young men, some of them my former law students. They drew around them other young men. Young women all over the state joined this movement.

"In nearly forty counties in four weeks Young Men's Schnader Clubs sprang up. In these are some of the outstanding citizens of the State. They are Republicans with New Spirit, those who can, and will, furnish the new blood for the campaigns and the work ahead."

This New Spirit, however, the Attorney General said, was not a Youth Movement alone. He cited the presence of Colonel Rupert Elder, dean of the Mifflin County bar, at one of his meetings, enthusiastic, ardent and fervent in his support of Schnader.

"He is eighty years old," Mr. Schnader said. "He thinks as a young man, however. He is of the New Spirit. They have youthful ideas, these elderly people who have grown younger as their years advance.

"Thus my program of uniting the Republican Party for a new era of public service has been acceptable to those past middle age as well as those under it.

"The New Spirit can unite our party. It can keep our state safe for the new Republicanism in November. Come with us along the road that leads to constructive achievement."

To The Thinking Republicans Of Pennsylvania In Whatever Activities Engaged

Out of national legislation comes the help or the harm that determines the welfare of this great industrial empire called Pennsylvania.

Laws which give foreign producers and wage-earners an advantage over domestic producers and wage-earners, bear down upon the people of Pennsylvania with destructive consequences.

Laws which create subsidies for special groups or activities are like a suction pump working day and night to draw off the wealth created in this State, which should go back into other developments and widened wage-paying.

Laws which are designed to give especial advantages to the agriculture of the West and South, discriminate directly against our own farmers, inflicting losses from which they have every right to be protected.

The Federal Government (under A.A.A.) is paying a billion dollars to the large producers of Cotton, Wheat, Corn, Hogs, etc., to curtail production. The object of this curtailment is to increase the prices of those agricultural products. The money for this particular subsidy does not come from the general tax fund, but is derived from special taxes imposed upon the processing of these subsidized products. These taxes are added into the retail prices of foods and clothing.

Here Are The Government's Own Figures

For every dollar that Pennsylvania consumers pay in A. A. A. taxes, the people of this State get back, in A. A. A. benefits, the munificent sum of ONE CENT.

But Arkansas is the State of Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader of the Senate; and for every dollar the consumers of that State pay, they get back $26.57.

Mississippi is the State of Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Senate; and for every dollar the consumers of that State pay, they get back $23.20.

Along with this, the Administration is now urging a proposal by which it would take industrial employment away from Pennsylvania and similar States, and TRANSFER IT TO FOREIGN MILLS AND FACTORIES.

The purpose is to lower duties on certain products to a point where the American industry would lose its American market and be forced out of business. The American industry would be destroyed in order to give that work to foreign mills and factories. The work and wages would be taken from American employees and given to the employees of a similar industry in some foreign country.

MEMBERS OF THE CABINET have stated that industries now supplying big payrolls and large employment in Pennsylvania are slated for the junkpile if this proposal is adopted.

The Lace Industry Has Been Specifically Listed

There are lace mills in Philadelphia, Chester, Columbia, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and other points throughout the State. They employ, even in these times, upward of 10,000 persons, with a weekly payroll of well above $100,000.

But the lace mills of Pennsylvania are not the only ones on this program of destruction. Others are already on the list.

The American Federation of Labor is Bitterly Fighting This Proposal

Senator David A. Reed Is Leading That Battle In The United States Senate

We believe that one of Pennsylvania's most important needs is to retain Senator Reed in the Senate. He is young, able, courageous, and now possesses an experience and prestige which are assets to the people of this State. He has been a member of the Senate for 12 years and is now one of the Republican leaders of that body. Under a Republican majority he will become chairman of the Finance Committee, the most powerful committee of the Senate.

But it is not only under a Republican Administration, or a Republican majority in the Senate, that Senator Reed commands respect and exercises great influence on behalf of his constituents. Here is what outstanding Democratic members of the Senate have said about him:

"I could not allow the occasion to go by without giving vent to the admiration I have for him, regardless of political or other fundamental differences over public questions. I may say in this connection, too, that I think we have all been edified by the fine manner in which he has stood here on the floor of the Senate, often alone, taking uncomplainingly blow after blow, doing his duty as he sincerely believed was in the interest of his fellow men."

Senator DAVID L. WALSH
Democrat, Massachusetts

(Senate speech, June 15, 1932)

"The fact is that the senior Senator from Pennsylvania, as no other Senator on either side of the chamber, assumed the leadership of this question and spent weeks and months delving into it and presenting the statistical aspects of it, and arguing the questions with an earnestness and conducting his fight with a skill which I have never seen exceeded on any problem in the Senate since I have been a member of it."

Senator CARTER GLASS
Democrat, Virginia

(Senate speech, April 23, 1930)

The lustre of a Senator so esteemed, even by the leaders of an opposite party, cannot be dimmed by the mud of a political antagonist.

In the Primary, on May 15th, Senator Reed will be a candidate for the Republican nomination to succeed himself. We urge you to vote for Senator Reed and thereby help Pennsylvania to retain the advantage our people have in his ability, experience, seniority and position of leadership in the United States Senate.

CLARK GRIFFITH, the silver-haired master mind of the Washington Senators, is standing pat this season with practically the same line-up in the field that won the American League pennant last year, only to lose the Big Series to those miraculous Giants.

The only change in the Senators' line-up so far is the substitution of outfielder Jonathan Stone for the veteran George Goslin, who was traded to the Tigers. Whether young Cecil Travis, when the going gets tough, will be able to displace the smooth-riding veteran, Bluege, at the far corner remains to be seen.

Griffith's hopes of another American League pennant this season depend largely on whether his veteran hurlers hold up. The Senators' touted moundmen were the biggest factors in their 1933 triumph, and they must function at their pitching best if Washington is to repeat.

At the start of the season, Joe Cronin's mound mechanics failed to show their expected class. It was said that the Senators' hurlers were slow in rounding into form because they had not faced many big league teams in spring training. Be that as it may, the Capitol City fans were not a little worried over the ineffectiveness of Whitehill, Weaver, Crowder and Company.

Earl Whitehill, frail southpaw pitcher, upon whom Griffith is banking heavily this year, failed to last the route in his opening start, but the veteran pitcher is expected to win many games for the Washingtons before the season is over.

Whitehill enjoyed the most successful season of his career under which he must shoulder during the present campaign, the Senators' pennant chances will suffer a severe setback.
